

Further Reformed Resources

By Dan Jensen (2023)

For those who have become convinced of Reformed theology either through my website, other means, or a combination of those factors, and who have the time and abilities to go far deeper into Reformed doctrine and desire to do so, this essay is intended to help you with that endeavor. For those who may have just stumbled onto this essay and don't really know what Reformed theology is, I recommend reading through all of my works for beginners to gain a strong grasp of what is meant by this term. They can all be found on my website in the section on works for beginners.

Getting back to those who have become convinced of Reformed doctrine and wish to go deeper, I first recommend reading through all of my works and not just the ones for beginners, and then all of the works by RC Sproul to gain not only a solid grasp of the deeper aspects of Reformed theology, but to gain a much stronger foundation for all of Christian theology. After doing this, I recommend two key websites that have a wealth of amazing information and resources from a Reformed perspective. I do not agree with everything said by Sproul or either of these two websites, but overall they will help you really dig deeper and I hope that you prayerfully come to your own conclusions on matters as you do so. These two websites are the Monergism website and the Triablogue website. Both can easily be found through a simple Google search. I especially recommend all of the works by Steve Hays. He was the most underrated apologist of the past 30 years by far.

As far as Bible commentaries from a Reformed perspective, I am currently working on ones of the entire Bible. While these will build on my works for beginners, they will still be at a fairly intermediate level. But, I think for many they will be a step in the right direction. I am hoping to have the New Testament done and up on my website by the end of 2024. The Old Testament will probably not be done and up for a few years. But, I do recommend keeping an eye out for those. With that said, for really deep and strong commentaries from a Reformed perspective, both of the websites that I just recommended give a plethora of fantastic resources on that front that will keep you very busy for a very long time if you choose to go down that route.
